Jogo do Galo

For some historians, "Jogo do Galo" or "Três em linha" is a variant of a game played in Ancient Greece and Phoenicia.

Similar to tic-tac-toe but in a more athletic way, this traditional Portuguese game requires a clay court to draw a grid of three rows by three columns. The aim of the game is to obtain three objects of your color in a row, horizontally, vertically or diagonally, while preventing your opponent from winning the next move.
